Walk to a pair of uma lulik (sacred house) in the hills above Manleuana. Maun Paul's family has lived there for five generations and is very welcoming to the few people who drop by. There's men's and women's sacred houses which are still used for traditional ceremonies.

Difficulty rationale – The route involves over 400m of height gain with a few steepish sections, but it is on a good path past a series of subsistence farms along a ridgeline.
